BOMBAY COURIER

EXTRAORDINARY.

TUESDAY, 15TH NOV. 1814.

WE have the pleaſure at length to announce the arrival of one of the long expected Indiamen. The Indus, Captain Weltden, came to an anchor late last night, having arrived in company with three other ſhips, the Perſeverance and William Petrie from Bengal, and the Ernaad from Calicut; It was not generally known that one of the four veſſels ſignaled was an Indiaman till late in the evening, and it was then ſuppoſed, as the Ernaad and Indus ſtood into the Harbour cloſe together, that both the Indiamen were coming in; but we understand, that the Indus parted with the rest of the fleet of the Cape on the 8th of September, and stood on to Bombay a single ſhip.

The Fleet left England on the 8th of June and Madeira on the 10th of July, and accounts had reached Madeira from England previous to the departure of the fleet, of as late a date as the 24th of June, very little public news of an intereſting nature has been received. The following is a liſt of the Paſſengers arrived in the Indus.

Mrs. D. Johnſton, Mrs. D. Allardyce, Miſs C. Johnſton, Miſs A. Johnſton, Miſs A. M. Hay, Miſs M. Boye, Miſs C. Llewellin, Miſs F. Cracroft, the Revd. Archdeacon Barnes, Mr. J. Allardyce, Surgeon of H. M. 34th Regiment, Mr. F. Sheppie, Aſst. Surgeon, Mr. J. C. Paul, Mr. Mc'Mahon, Cadets: Meſsrs. Broadwood, Gorly, Dyſon, Lloyd, and Clements, Volunteers for the Bombay Marine. Miſs Wallace, ſervant to Mrs. Johnſton, and 2 Native ſervants.

The incident which appears to have made the greateſt impreſſion on the public mind since our laſt advices, is the conviction of Lord Cochrane, Mr. Butt and Mr. Cochrane Johnſtone, for a fraud on the committee of the Stock Exchange, for which Lord Cochrane is to ſtand in the Pillory, and Mr. Butt is heavily fined and to be impriſoned for two years, Mr. Cochrane Johnſtone has abſconded.

We have as yet only ſeen papers of the 3d, 4th, and 6th of June which do not contain any news of intereſt, except the ſhort debate in the Houſe of Commons which we have extracted.

For the following Heads of Intelligence we are indebted to a friend.

It ſeems that the differences in Spain had, by mutual conſent been referred to the Duke of Wellington who arrived at Madrid accompanied only by two Aides de Camp ſhortly after he had been nominated the mediator between the King and the Spaniſh people—It had been reported in England that he had been aſſaſſinated ſhortly after his arrival, but the latest accounts mentain nothing of this horrible report, and we are led to believe it is totally falſe.

The King of France had agreed to accept of the new conſtitution with very few alterations and had met the Senate for that purpoſe.—It was hoped that the diſturbances were nearly at an end in Paris, and the laſt diviſion of the Allied Army was to leave that Capital on the 4th of June.

Nothing appears to be been finally determined upon with reſpect either to Norway, or as to our Negociations with America. The Crown Prince of Sweden was extremely unpopular, and it was thought that ſomething would be given him in lieu of Norway.

A great promotion had taken place in the Navy, and we hear alſo in the Army, but we have no other particulars than that nearly all the Vice Admirals had been created Admirals, and that the promotion of Captains to be Rear Admirals extended to Captain Talbot.

The Emperor of Ruſsia and the King of Pruſsia had arrived in England about the 8th of June and had been most joyfully received. It became the faſhion of the Populace to inſiſt upon ſhaking hands with Marſhal Blucher, who was incessantly invited to this cordial proof of the regard of John Bull towards him, and received innumerable proofs of their eſteem with apparently great pleaſure.

The Prince Regent ratified the Treaty of Peace on the 3d of June. It is conſidered as a very excellent Treaty in England, and Lord Caſtlereagh had become very popular in conſequence of it.

The Queen's Drawing Room on the 3d of June was one of the moſt ſplendid ever known, more than five thouſand Faſhionables were preſent, at the moment that the Princeſs of Oldenburgh entered the Doorway the firſt gun, announcing the ratification of the Treaty of Peace, was fired.

The Cornwallis, Captain Digby which left Bombay in December had arrived, a few days before the Fleet left England, and was put out of Commission.

The Fleet which has ſailed for America, conſiſting of ten Sail of the Line is, we hear, commanded by Rear Admiral Pulteney Malcolm.

EUROPE DEATHS.

The Right Honorable the Earl of Minto about a month after his arrival in England.
Sir Nash Grose, in his 74th year, late one of the Judges of the King's Bench.

PRINCESS OF WALES—3D JUNE.

The Speaker thought it his duty to acquaint the House, that since he had come to his place, he had received a letter from her Royal Highness the Princeſs of Wales, which, with the leave of the House, he would read.

The Speaker then read as follows:—

"Connaught House, 3d June, 1814.

"The Princeſs of Wales desires Mr. Speaker will inform the House of Commons, that his Royal Highness the Prince Regent has been advised to take such steps as have prevented her from appearing at Court, and to declare his Royal Highness's fixed and unalterable determination never to meet the Princeſs of Wales upon any occasion, either in public or private.

"The proceedings of 1806 and 1807, and last year are in the recollection of the House, as well as the ample and unqualified vindication of the Princeſs's conduct to which those proceedings led.

"It is impoſſible for the Princeſs of Wales to conceal from herself the intention of the advice which has now been given to the Prince Regent, and the probability that there are ultimate objects in view, pregnant with danger to the security of the succeſſion, and the domeſtic peace of the realm.

"Under these circumstances, even if the Princeſs's duty towards herself could suffer her to remain silent, her sense of what is due to her daughter, and to the highest interests of the Country, compels her to make this communication to the House of Commons.

"The Princeſs of Wales encloses Copies of the Correſpondence which has passed, and which she requests Mr. Speaker will communicate to the House."

The inclosure was a Copy of the letter from the Princeſs of Wales to the Prince Regent; from the Queen to the Princeſs of Wales, and the reply of the Princeſs, together with the subsequent notes between her Majesty and the Princeſs of Wales, the whole, as they appeared in the Morning Poſt of Tuesday and Thursday last.—[Thése were read by the Clerk.]

Mr. Methuen and Mr. Bathurst then rose at the same time. Mr. Methuen was loudly called for from the Opposition Benches, but Mr. Bathurst continued on the legs. A loud cry of Chair, Chair, succeeded. The Speaker then interfered.

Mr. Bathurst said, he rose to make an arrangement relating to some Orders of the Day.

Mr. Whitbread said, that the Hon. Member for Wiltshire (Mr. Methuen) was clearly in poſſeſſion of the House, and had been pointed to by the Speaker before the Right Hon. Gentleman had risen.

Mr. Methuen was then about to begin his speech, when a Member (we believe Mr Lygon) moved the Standing Order for the exclusion of strangers, and the Gallery was immediately cleared.

After strangers were excluded, we understood that Mr. Methuen, prefacing his motion by a short speech on the peculiarly hard and delicate situation of the Princeſs of Wales, moved "that an humble address be presented to the Prince Regent, entreating that he would be pleased to communicate to the House the names of the persons who had advised his Royal Highness to take those measures which had led to the exclusion of the Princeſs of Wales from her Majesty's Drawing Room."

The motion being seconded by a Member whose name we could not learn:

Mr. Whitbread made an animated speech, in which he pointedly descanted on the peculiar hardship of the situation of the Princeſs of Wales, and reprobated the indignities which were offered to her Royal Highness in terms so strong, that we do not feel justified in reporting them from verbal information. He concluded, as we were informed, with giving his decided support to the motion.—He was followed by.

Mr. Ponsonby who could not support the motion in its present shape, which he deemed quite unparliamentary; but he hoped, if it were withdrawn, that the best effects might follow with respect to the adoption of amicable arrangements.

Mr. Wynne and Mr. W. S. Wortley coincided with Mr. Ponsonby in those sentiments.

Mr. Tierney was of opinion that the subject was one of such extreme delicacy, that it would be highly improper for the House to obtrude its interposition in any way, if this could by any means be avoided. He therefore earnestly recommended his Majesty's Ministers to offer such advice as might, at least, lead to the reception of the Princeſs of Wales at the next and future Drawing-rooms.

Mr. Methuen, after a few words, consented to withdraw his motion.

The other Orders of the Day were then disposed of, and at eight o'clock the House adjourned till Monday.

King's Health.—Yeſterday the following Bulletin of the ſtate of His Majeſty's health during the laſt month, was exhibited at St. James's Palace:

"Windſor Castle, June 4.

"The King's health has been uninterruptedly good, and His Majesty has been very tranquil throughout the last month, though His Majesty's diſorder continues without any ſensible alteration."

On Saturday His Majesty completed his 76th year.
